

SCORECARD: HOW U.N. MEMBER STATES VOTED ON SELECTED HUMAN RIGHTS RESOLUTIONS IN THE THIRD COMMITTEE OF THE 61st GENERAL ASSEMBLY, 2006

The two scorecards below rank UN member states by the votes they cast on resolutions recently considered in the UN General Assembly's Third Committee. The resolutions chosen for this analysis are those concerning some of the worst human rights violators. The results range from a score of 6 (positive votes on all six resolutions) to -6 (negative on all six resolutions). A government's absence from the vote or a vote to abstain was given a value of zero, as abstentions cut both ways (countries sometimes abstain to make a principled stand on a resolution when they feel they cannot vote counter to the wishes of regional or other alliances). The first scorecard ranks the members of the United Nations Democracy Caucus, a group of governments established in 2003 by the Community of Democracies to coordinate common positions on issues regarding democracy and human rights. The second scorecard analyzes the votes of all other countries not in the UN Democracy Caucus.
